Thought for the Week

'Here is a retelling of Jesus' parable with a local flavour. One day, despite being unwell himself, a grandfather set out from Windsor to go to Slough to visit a sick grandson. In the midday heat he collapsed near a bus stop. A young professional passing by noticed the old man's plight, but could not delay. His lunch break was very short, so he passed on. A motorist whose parking disc on his car was already overdue could not risk having his car towed away, so he hurried on. Those waiting in the bus queue reassured each other that it was disgraceful to have people lying on the footpath. Nobody should be so drunk, especially so early in the day. But two badly dressed young men dashed across the street and lifted the grandfather onto a bench. They assured him they would stay with him until an ambulance arrived and they could accompany him to a hospital. These two men were non-nationals who could not get work.

Who was a neighbour to somebody's grandfather?
